HACKNEY'S streets are set to be filled with fabulous costumes, energetic dance moves and banging beats, as Hackney One Carnival returns on 13 September. The colourful procession will leave Ridley Road at 2pm, working its way south along Dalston Lane, Richmond Road and Mare Street towards Hackney Town Hall, before heading up Amhurst Road and back to Ridley Road for 5pm. A grand finale will take place at Ridley Road from 5pm to 8pm, featuring dub and reggae sound systems and delicious food. For more info and pics, see page 5.

BACK WITH A BANG

ASPECTACULAR fireworks display is set to return to Clissold Park on 7 November, following last year's sell-out success.

A children's funfair, street performers, and food and drink stalls are just some of the entertainment set to accompany the 'pyro-musical' which sees fireworks synchronised to music.

Tickets go on sale on 8 September and the Council is giving away 300 for free through two offers: one for residents and one for registered, Hackney-based charities.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "After the success of last year's wonderful show, we have decided to once again hold what is becoming one of the highlights of the borough's social calendar."

Gates open at 6pm and the display starts at 7.30pm. It lasts for 20 minutes and is suitable for all ages. Entertainment will be weather dependent.

To enter the draw to win one of 100 pairs of tickets, residents should e-mail: park.events@hackney.gov.uk with their name, postcode and the subject title:

'Resident Free Tickets Prize Draw' before 20 September. Winners will be notified by 23 September.

Hackney-based registered charities are also invited to apply for 100 free firework tickets for their service users.

E-mail: park.events@hackney.gov.uk with the name of the organisation, registered charity number, postcode, and subject title: 'Concessionary Tickets'.

Standard tickets for the show cost £7.50 for adults and £2.50 for children who live in the borough; and £8.50 and £3.50 respectively for non-residents.

They can be bought from Hackney Empire, either in person at the box office; online at: www.hackneyempire.co.uk; or by calling: 020 8985 2424.

Residents are also being asked to suggest music tracks and themes to help design the fireworks display. Last year's was 'fire and ice'.

E-mail suggestions to: park.events@hackney.gov.uk with the subject title 'Firework Themes and Tracks'.

Last year's display sold out and was the first time fireworks had been held in the borough for nearly a decade.

Clissold House has been named as one of the top 10 best wedding venues in London

Wedding wow

CLISOLD House has been named as one of the top wedding venues in London by a leading bridal magazine.

The fully-restored Grade II* listed 18th-century mansion house, in Stoke Newington's beautiful Clissold Park, took sixth spot in the 43 venue rundown by 'You and Your Wedding' magazine.

The article praised the venue's 'tranquil surroundings' and 'exceptional views of the lake and greenery.'

It added: "Original features such as marble fireplaces and the iconic spiral staircase will make your wedding photographer jump for joy."

Clissold House opened in 2011 after a £9million restoration of the building and surrounding park, which was jointly funded by the Council and the Heritage and Big Lottery Funds. As part of the renovation work, original period features such as fireplaces and skylights were restored, and sit alongside modern facilities.

Its five refurbished function rooms and outdoor terrace are available for hire by community, business and educational groups, as well as for private parties and wedding receptions.

The Council's events team can help with all pre-planning and set-up, and provide support on the day.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Clissold House is a magnificent venue in beautiful surroundings. For it to be named as one of the top 10 best wedding venues in London is an honour."

In the last five years the Council has opened or restored four of its current five key venues, including:

Hackney Town Hall, in Mare Street. The Assembly Halls in the iconic Art Deco building reopened in 2013.

Stoke Newington Town Hall, in Church Street. Another of the borough's best Art Deco buildings re-opened in 2010.

Hackney Marshes Centre, in Homerton Road. The award-winning building, which sits in acres of green space, was built in 2011.

West Reservoir, in Green Lanes. The former pump-house overlooks a magnificent body of water.

Green light for Marshes pavilion

The Planning Inspectorate found in favour of the Council's pavilion plans which it said were 'consistent with the use of the Marshes'

A NEW sports pavilion on Hackney Marshes took a step closer to becoming reality after the Planning Inspectorate gave the Council's plans the green light.

The proposals would relocate and replace the present changing block on North Marsh – which is dilapidated and does not meet current sporting guidelines and regulations – with a new facility, complete with modern cricket and football changing rooms, social space and a viewing area facing the cricket pitch.

Designs for the new pavilion and its suggested site, slightly east of the current block, were also backed by the Football

We worked hard to ensure [the pavilion] would not have a negative impact on the beauty... of the Marshes

Foundation and the England and Wales Cricket Board. Applications for the new building, off Mandeville Road, and an associated car park, and retrospective permission for the East Marsh car park, were approved by the Council's Planning Committee earlier this year.

However, the Planning Inspectorate, which considers applications on common land, decided to hold a public inquiry in Stoke Newington Town Hall in June as a result of objections to the proposals. The inspector said the pavilion proposals were 'consistent with the use of the Marshes as it is connected with the enjoyment of traditional pastimes on the common'.

The inspector vetoed the East Marsh car park however, on the grounds that 'landscape and public rights of access would be harmed'.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "The decision about the pavilion is fantastic news and brings us a major step closer to realising the full potential of the Marshes as a centre for sport and community activity, accessible to all.

"Lots of people told us they wanted this new pavilion and we worked hard to ensure it would not have a negative impact on the beauty, tranquillity and wildlife of the Marshes."

"It's disappointing that our application for the new car park on East Marsh was turned down and we will now be developing proposals to return this area to grass to comply with the inspector's decision."

Hackney Marshes is widely considered the home of grassroots football with more than 60 pitches.

News in brief

young people during the school holidays. The deadline for applications is 23 September.

Help boost Hackney's health and happiness with new fund

PEOPLE are being invited to put forward their ideas to improve residents' health and happiness with the launch of the second Healthier Hackney Fund.

Following the success of last year's fund, which supported 32 projects across the borough, the Council has set aside £250,000 for a new batch of initiatives.

This year's focus is on ways to tackle obesity, address sexual health and substance misuse, and encourage communities to work together to improve wellbeing.

The idea is to promote local initiatives which complement established approaches to tackling health issues.

A launch event is set to take place at the Hackney Empire on 18 September, and is an opportunity for individuals, social enterprises and community and voluntary groups to discuss their ideas, meet the Council's Public Health Team and potential partners.

For more information on the Fund and to register for the launch, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/HHF2015

Property developer chosen to build two new tower blocks in Colville Estate

A DEVELOPER has been chosen to build two new towers for private homes, the sale of which will pay for the construction of 449 Council homes for social renting and shared ownership in Shoreditch.

Anthology will start work next year on the site of the third phase of the Colville Estate's regeneration, to build 198 properties for private sale, due to be finished in 2018.

A petition in support of this development signed by 291 estate residents was submitted to the borough's planning sub-committee last July.

The third phase involves replacing an existing

12-storey tower block with two new ones of 16 and 20 storeys, designed by Karakusevic Carson Architects and David Chipperfield Architects, with a community cafe at ground floor level.

Resident leaseholders and freeholders can choose to remain on the estate by moving into a brand new home under a shared equity or shared ownership arrangement.

Cllr Philip Glanville,

Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "This is another step forward to providing much-needed high quality new homes for Colville residents at social rents, in the absence of government funding, and with this phase receiving the clear support of the estate."

Open House London properties in Hackney: 1. Victorian terraced house conversion on Englefield Road, N1; 2. Uniform Wares Showroom, EC2A; 3. Sidworth Street's mixed-use residential building complete with rooftop pool, E8

Architecture open to all

A GLASS-bottomed swimming pool, the UK's first heated clay ceiling system, recycled tube train carriages, and six-foot narrow boats are among the Hackney spaces being thrown open to the public for Open House London this year.

The capital's largest annual festival of architecture and design takes place on 19 and 20 September, with 700 buildings and spaces opening their doors for free. Thirty eight of them will be in Hackney, along with walking tours, talks and film screenings. Victoria Thornton, Founding Director of Open-City, the architecture education organisation behind the festival, said: "Open House is a unique and vibrant annual event, offering people across London the chance to explore and learn about the capital's architecture."

"In 2014, 87 per cent of participants said the event was the best way to see, explore and learn about London's architecture."

"This year we're putting together a great programme

“Open House is a unique and vibrant annual event, offering people the chance to explore the capital’s architecture”

of open buildings, walks, tours and talks taking in everything from award-winning contemporary homes to major regeneration areas."

With the average London house price topping £500,000 this year, the capital faces serious housing challenges. The festival has picked its theme of 'revealing' accordingly, probing potential solutions through the architecture that's on show.

In Hackney, that includes 24 St John's Church Road, E9, a traditional Victorian terrace with a modern renovation, featuring a green roof sown with sedum and an eco heating system. Adelaide Wharf, E2, a housing scheme which won an award from the Royal Institute of British Architects in 2008, is opening its doors for people to check out the 'outdoor rooms' in each apartment, half hung and half cantilevered out over the street.

Last year's Hackney Design Award-winner, Cardinal Pole Catholic School, E9, suggests innovative solutions to the challenges of a new school build on an inner-city site, while new kinds of work space are illustrated by the recycled tube carriages at Village Underground, EC2A, and co-working studios at The Lab, N1.

Walking tours, meanwhile, explore the potential posed by Hackney's brownfield sites; its examples of timber frame buildings; and some of the borough's solutions to the pressures on housing, public space and energy use with the Woodberry Down Estate regeneration project.

DID YOU KNOW?

Our intrepid reporter, Dila Tumer, tries out an array of free sporting activities at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park

Witness the fitness

By Dila Tumer

I'd always thought the options for keeping fit and active in London were limited to going for a run in the park, or spending a lot of money to join a gym.

So imagine my surprise when I found out that Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park had a whole month of free activities lined up in August, ranging from Brazilian capoeira to stand up paddle boarding.

When I first arrived at the park on 27 August, I felt like a real tourist, especially when we reached the beach with its golden sand and funfair rides. The well landscaped green spaces – complete with secluded wooden seats, shaded trees and beautiful plants – added to the unique atmosphere of the park.

Unfortunately, I wasn't able to have a go at either paddle boarding or canoeing thanks to our glorious British weather, as the morning's rain had made water levels too high.

However, the downpour couldn't stop me completely, and the first activity I took part in was beach volleyball. My friend Simge and I joined a team each and started to play. Our instructor, Graham Bell, was very enthusiastic and patient with all the participants. In less than 20 minutes we had a grasp of the game, making some

“The park was so much more than what I expected it to be, it was almost like a green ‘mini-city’”

Who needs the Med when there's a beach in East London mistakes along the way. It was just a short walk to my next activity, boxing. This is perhaps the one sport I was most hesitant about trying because I didn't think I would enjoy it. Well, I was wrong. My coach, Ebs Ayerm, made the session fun and easy to learn. By the end, I was able to stand with my left foot in front and learnt to always have a hand up in order to defend my face.

My final activity was a pop up mini-golf session coached by Helen Tang, who made the sport exciting by putting a challenge to Simge and I. We had to get the ball as close to the target as possible, with a point system awarded for touching different parts of a flag. We were also taught how to hold the golf club, with the proper stance to take a shot.

Overall, I really enjoyed my day at the park and learnt skills that I don't believe I would have picked up otherwise.

The park was so much more impressive than I expected it to be, it was almost like a green 'mini-city'. If you haven't already visited the park, I suggest you do: it's the perfect place for a family day out.

The park will host the very first #BeActive Festival on 12 September, a day of free 'come and try' activities suitable for all abilities and ages, with a guest appearance from Lizzie Yarnold, gold medallist at the Winter Olympics in the skeleton.

Sticking to the streets

By Harriet Worsley

I STARTED making art on the streets because, as a homeless person, they were the safest place to keep my work," says artist Stik, whose images can be seen from Hackney to Jordan, and are even found inside the homes of rock stars Elton John and Brian May.

"For a while, when I was homeless, I used to carry my drawings around in a bag," he explains. Adding: "Then I got evicted from a squat, lost the bag, and with it went a year's worth of work. So the streets became the best place to put it."

The journey from being a 'homeless, struggling artist' to a figure so well renowned he can go exclusively by his moniker Stik, and whose book went straight into the Sunday Times best seller list when it was launched last month, has been 'tough, rough and chaotic'.

Those first paintings, on the walls of Hackney Wick were 'my way of communicating with the outside world. As a homeless person, it was the only way of making myself visible and understood'.

He drew stick figures – just six lines and two dots for eyes. Now an iconic style, it emerged in those early days simply because: "It was the easiest way of drawing a person fast enough to avoid getting caught", he laughs.

They may be simple, but these familiar figures are extraordinarily expressive. Critics have attributed their power to the years Stik spent as a life-drawing model.

“Street art is an open forum for discussion. From a historical perspective, it’s the biggest art movement of all time”

Stik explains: "I spent years earning money as an artists' model at Central Saint Martins. That's how I got my education. It taught me a lot about balance and how to give drawings that spark of life."

It was moving into Mare Street's St Mungo's Broadway hostel, however, that Stik marks as 'the turning point' in his life.

He says: "One of my favourite pieces of work is one I did on a chimney in Mare Street. It's gone now but it was opposite the hostel. When I moved in I could see it – as if it was watching over me. That's when things started to improve.

"At St Mungo's I got the support I needed and I was able to lend help to other social causes. The work became more political."

Perhaps the most famous example is 'Big Mother', the UK's tallest piece of street art, painted by Stik last year over the entire height of the Charles Hocking House in an Acton council estate. Depicting a mother holding her child, it is a comment on the lack of social housing in the area.

His work has also taken him to Japan to tackle recycling and Norway to look at renewable energy. But Stik emphasises: "My pieces are not overtly political – it's down to your own interpretation."

These locations might be a long way from Hackney, whose streets and issues he truly understands, but, he says: "Wherever I go, I talk to the residents about the issues that are most important to them. Street art is an open forum for discussion. From a historical perspective, it's the biggest art movement of all time, influencing and involving the most people."

When Stik was offered a book deal last year, it took 12 months of hard work to put together all his work. He says: "I looked back over my life. It was difficult because my life has been chaotic, but it was very cathartic."

When it launched, last month, it met with stellar reviews. Stik was pleased, but had already moved onto his next project: a mural in Homerton hospital. He says:

"It's of a sleeping baby and it's about how vulnerable the NHS is, and how much we need to protect it."

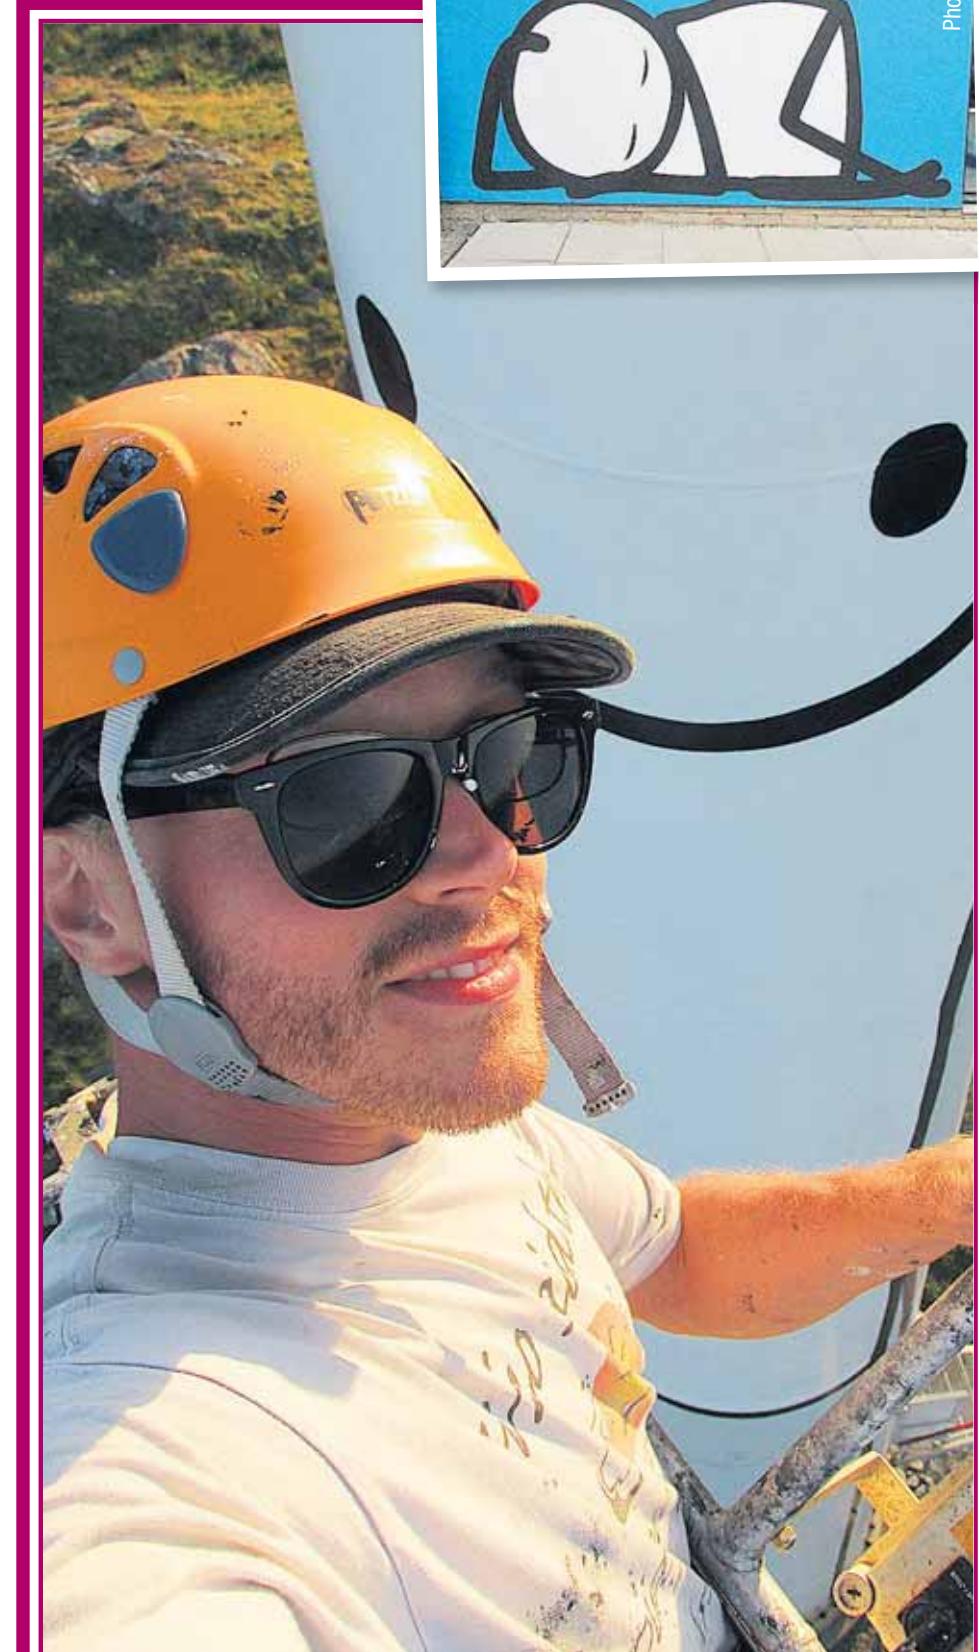

Hackney remains at the heart of his work. He is giving a first edition copy of the book to every library in the borough he treasures, because, Stik says: "Hackney is my home. It's the first place where I understood the meaning of the word community."

Swapping trainers for gardening tools

GoodGym runners swap their trainers for gardening tools to help clear the gardens of Hackney Homes residents

THREE'S a new team of superheroes in town. These do-gooders meet, sometimes under the cover of darkness, having changed from their every day clothes into the costume of their tribe (running shorts, trainers, sweatbands).

Then, together, they race to the rescue. Their mission? To help Hackney's elderly and disabled residents look after their gardens.

The Garden Swap scheme is run by Hackney Homes with support from GoodGym, a not-for-profit organisation that encourages runners to combine exercise with doing something worthwhile in their community.

“The volunteers did a good job with the clearing of the garden”

Members of the Hackney branch have helped clear over 20 gardens in the borough, with such success that Hackney Homes is now looking for other volunteer organisations to join in.

Garden Swap volunteers run in small groups before stopping off at the homes of residents who need help.

Hackney Homes staff drop tools at the location in advance, so that the runners can get to work before completing the final stretch of their run.

Hoxton resident, Ms Aysun, who has received three visits through the scheme, said: “I have an eight-metre long garden and it was like a jungle with lots of rubbish to clear. The volunteers did a good job with clearing it.”

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, added: “We know that many of our residents love to garden, however maintaining a private garden can sometimes be quite a challenge.

“Expanding this scheme to include organisations like Good Gym makes it possible for us to increase the help to residents.”

Vote for your favourite Hackney park or green space in the year's People's Choice Award

PEOPLE are being urged to vote for a Hackney park in this year's Green Flag People's Choice Award – which would officially make it the nation's favourite if it wins.

The borough is home to over 58 parks, gardens and green spaces totalling around 330 hectares.

Nineteen Hackney parks and green spaces now have

Green Flag status, the national benchmark for the best parks in Britain.

Paul Todd, Green Flag award manager, said: “We all have a favourite park, whether it's our local green space, or a special park we'll travel miles to visit. We are urging everyone to vote for their favourite park, so we can crown one of these 1,582 special parks as the People's Choice 2015.”

All Green Flag award-winning sites are entered into the annual People's Choice Award vote. Last year saw over 35,000 votes cast by the public, with

Victoria Park in Tower Hamlets receiving the highest number. The Green Flag parks in Hackney are: Albion Square,

N1; Aske Gardens, E8; Butterfield Green, N16; Cassland Road Gardens, E9; Clapton Pond, E5; Clapton Square, E5; Clissold Park, N16; De Beauvoir Square, N1; Hackney Downs, E5; Hackney Marshes, E9; Haggerston Park, E2; Hoxton Square, N1; London Fields, E8; Millfields Park, E8;

Shoreditch Park, N1; Springfield Park, E5; St John's Churchyard Gardens, E5; Well Street Common, E9; and West Hackney Recreation Ground, N16.

News in brief

Help improve waste and recycling in blocks of flats

HACKNEY Homes and the Council want to hear from residents who live on estates or in blocks of flats about how recycling facilities can be improved. Residents can complete a short survey to be in with a chance of winning £50 in a prize draw. Complete the online survey at: www.hackneyhomes.org.uk/recycling

Motorists fined for littering

CAR, van and lorry drivers who litter from their vehicles in Hackney risk legal action from the Council.

In the past, fines could only be issued if it could be proved who dropped the litter. But a law passed last year means that if rubbish is seen being thrown from a vehicle the registered keeper can be fined.

In recent weeks two people have been issued with advisory notices and one has been fined £80. If these are ignored, the owners of the cars could be prosecuted and fined up to £2,500.

To report litter in Hackney, download the Love Clean Hackney app, which lets users take a photo, select a location on a map and send in a report on the go; or e-mail: enforcementsupport@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 4810.

Artists and Artisans of the East End

1 Oct-1 Nov, Well Hung Gallery, 239 Hoxton Street, N1 5LG

PHOTOGRAPHER Ansell Cizic has lived in Hackney Wick for the past 10 years, witnessing – and documenting – the considerable transformation of the East End.

'Artists and Artisans of the East End' is an ongoing archival project of his, following the artists working and living in the area. Cizic's brief to himself was simple: one camera, one lens, daylight and a limited time in which to take the photograph.

Through his work, it became apparent to Cizic that the creative individuals who made Hackney Wick their home have also inadvertently made it an attractive financial proposition for property developers, leading them to now be 'an endangered species'.

Trash

8-19 September, Rosemary Branch Theatre, N1 3DT

THEY say there is no better friend than your sister, but when you've both resented each other for years, and been haunted by personal demons, sisters can quickly turn into enemies.

To prove each other wrong, the sisters at war desperately try to retrieve their mother's dying message, written to one of her daughters before it was thrown away.

After being knees deep in a 'trash' dump, they dig further and further into the lives led under the shadow of a domineering mother who still influences them, even after her death, and confront the resentment and abandonment that has defined the past few years of their relationship.

TEDx talks

Various dates, across Hackney's libraries

HACKNEY Libraries are set for the arrival of TEDx, a series of inspirational talks that share global ideas with local people. Each free event features two pre-recorded talks that have been plucked from the TED online archive on a set theme; from ageing with passion and how stress can be a good thing, to the power of love letters and why regrets shouldn't be a regret. All of the talks will be introduced by a host, who will then lead a group discussion, after both films, giving the audience an opportunity to share their thoughts on the topics and how they could prove to be an inspiration for themselves and others. TED is a non-profit organisation that aims to spread ideas, usually in the form of short talks of 18 minutes or less. Set up in 1984, TED today covers topics in more than 100 languages with TEDx events helping to share ideas in communities around the world. Over 270 apprenticeships and work experience placements have been created for local young people; promoting the construction sector in schools

MORE than 270 apprenticeships and work experience placements have been created for local young people thanks to a partnership between Hackney Homes and an employment charity.

The National Skills Academy for Construction (NSAfC) in Hackney has been preparing young people for careers in the industry through on-the-job training and work experience for the past four years.

The project, which has now come to an end, created 136 apprenticeships and 135 work experience

Young people have had the opportunity to gain some great work experience placements in construction for residents. It also helped promote careers in the sector in schools and further and higher education institutes.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "Young people who have participated in the programme have had the opportunity to gain some great practical work experience and be mentored by construction professionals. In addition to gaining new skills, that can contribute to their future career, the apprentices have also helped to make a difference to the homes of many residents."

One of the young people given a work experience placement on the project, Chantel Forrester, added: "I enjoyed having the responsibility that came with this job. It has been great to gain an insight into what is involved with this type of regeneration work for a social housing provider."

The NSAfC was funded by the Construction Industrial Training Board in 2011. It was supported by Hackney Homes and contractors Lakehouse, Balfour Beatty and Mulalley, which were responsible for training the young people and community engagement.

The Council scheme is designed to help young people save and teach them about responsible financial behaviour including budgeting, saving and handling cash.

The £20 credit will be paid into the account during the first year that the child starts secondary school. Parents can register an interest in opening an account by sending an e-mail with the subject 'credit union' to: creditunion@hackney.gov.uk. For more info, visit: www.londoncou.com/accounts/junior-savers-scheme/

Free coding class success

BUDGING computer programmers learnt how to create their own graphics, animations and apps thanks to two free, sold-out workshops.

The Council joined with Ravensbourne College to offer the creative coding sessions for adults interested in learning more about computer programming and how to forge a career in the tech industry.

The workshops were led by university lecturers in computing who taught the attendees the essentials of computer programming to code their own visuals and graphics on screen, create simple animations and make an interactive app.

Help children and young people get into reading through new venture Story Habit

AFTER 10 years on the high street in Victoria Park, bookseller Jo de Guia is closing her bookshop to focus instead on inspiring children to read through live literary events.

Launching her new venture, Story Habit, in partnership with local community engagement company LandSky, Jo said: "Especially in diverse areas like East London, young people need to be actively helped to develop a reading habit. By shifting our efforts to sell books in more child-friendly settings and to help sympathetic adults promote reading more actively, we believe Story Habit has a formula to help reignite children's passion for reading."

The initiative will engage top children's authors in festivals, workshops and bespoke school visits. It will also offer services for teachers and families, such as local literature walks designed to inspire reading, author and illustrator birthday parties and training opportunities.

The next event, called 'Poetry from Guideline to Front Line', is set to take place on 1 October at Shoreditch Town Hall.

Maria de la Paz Tissier's life was turned around after she took part in the New Age Games programme of activities to get fit and healthy

New you, New Age

At the age of 49, Maria de la Paz Tissier was unemployed, battling sickness, and could barely walk.

That was six years ago. Now the mum-of-three can boast of completing her first half-marathon earlier this summer (with her sights set on a full marathon next year) and a recently-launched online business.

Amazingly, she credits the incredible turnaround in her life to the Council's New Age Games programme. It gives residents, aged 50 and over, the opportunity to get fit, fight the fat, and relax the mind at exercise classes in venues across the borough – all for free.

Recalling her ill-health in 2009, Maria said: "I didn't know what was wrong with me, it was horrible. I visited my GP who diagnosed me with osteoporosis; for a few years I found it hard to do basic movements like standing up."

Then, in 2013, Maria, who lives in Homerton with her three children, aged 28,

When you are big you feel down and lack confidence, but exercise changes that. I lost four stone

15 and 13, discovered New Age Games, and signed up to Brazilian dance, yoga and 'fit to tone' sessions.

Maria continues: "It was difficult due to my severe lack of fitness and being overweight, but I found the classes enjoyable. Then I started to gain confidence which inspired me to start running, first 100m, then 300m, and gradually the distance increased."

Soon Maria began to notice more improvements, with her moods, then energy levels. She said:

"When you are big you feel down and lack confidence, but exercise changes that. I lost four stone and dropped three dress sizes and can now share clothes with my 15-year-old."

Maria's weight issues meant she suffered from acid problems which were affecting her vital organs. She said: "This has now gone and my osteoporosis has improved a lot. As has the breathing and chest pains I had. It is so important for parents to encourage their children to exercise. My children see their mum exercise and want to do it too."

Last June, Maria was watching the Run Hackney half marathon and saw people older than herself participating, and thought 'if they can do it, then so can I'.

On 10 May this year, Maria ran the 13-mile race in a time of just over 2hrs and 14mins. Then, in August, she took part in a relay race at the Olympic Stadium to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the London boroughs after being nominated by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, to represent the borough.

Her new-found energy also inspired Maria, originally from Mexico, to set up her own company. She said: "I put a business case together which I submitted to the East London Small Business Centre. In June, I was awarded a loan to start my own small business, selling online Mexican food.

"I was so proud. I always felt I'd never reach my potential because English was not my first language and I thought I lacked the determination to get what I want, but exercise has changed all that."

The next New Age Games programme begins in September. Sessions include tennis, badminton, cycling, chair-based activities and archery.

News in brief

New pitch for Haggerston Park

A STATE-of-the-art all-weather pitch, similar to those in the country's top professional sporting stadiums, has opened in Haggerston Park thanks to the Council.

The updated 'third generation' pitch is made of specialised, hard-wearing synthetic material and is ideal for football and rugby.

It replaces a near decade-old AstroTurf field which had become badly worn and damaged in parts. The new pitch has been tested to meet the highest-level standards, and boasts top-of-the-range yarn and a 25mm shockpad – 10mm thicker than the previous pitch.

Following consultation with sports clubs and residents, the Council changed the pitch markings of the new and improved surface to include a full-size football pitch, two half pitches and three smaller traverse pitches suitable for junior matches.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "This newly resurfaced pitch is fantastic: it boasts top-of-the-range materials and technology. This is an important investment for the health of local people and I hope residents and sports people will enjoy using it."

Hopping mad in Kent

By Sally England

Up until the outbreak of the Second World War, many Hackney families would join others from East London to make a late summer trip down to Kent to work on the annual hop harvest.

This was often their only break away from the city, and the chance to 'go hopping' was so fiercely fought over that a black market developed with the cards from Kentish farmers allocating a place on a particular farm, often being stolen or forged.

Women and children worked throughout the week, their husbands often joining them at the weekends. Nearly a third of the 250,000 hop pickers required for the harvest came from London, either walking the 35 mile journey or travelling by special cheap train services laid on every year.

The work was hard and dirty, the hours long, and only the most basic accommodation was provided. But, if they worked hard enough, a family could earn in four weeks what an average man would earn in 10, so with careful budgeting they might save enough for a new pair of boots or a coat for the winter.

Work started at 7am, with a break for tea and a sandwich at lunchtime, then continued until 5pm. The hops were sticky and irritated the skin, whilst the insecticides used on the hop bines caused eye inflammation and sometimes blindness.

Originally, the workers were left to find their own shelter for the season, often using cattle sheds, pigsties or stables. They would take water from nearby ditches, which inevitably led to problems with health and hygiene, such as the cholera outbreak of 1849 in which over 40 workers died.

The later 19th century saw concerted efforts, mainly by church figures, to improve the living conditions of hop pickers, with the first bylaws governing their accommodation adopted in 1874, though circumstances were slow to change. Accounts of the hoppers' lives, such as the Reverend J Y Stratton's 'Hops and Hop Pickers' of 1883, were published to raise awareness of the sometimes terrible conditions they suffered.

From the 1890s onwards, Father Richard Wilson from Stepney ran temporary annual hospitals for hoppers, eventually buying the old Rose and Crown pub in Five Oak Green as a permanent hospital which ran for over 60 years. A sign on the building stated 'Fine Ales, Stout and Porter Sold Here', but Wilson added 'not' before the last two words.

By the early 20th century, most farms provided hopper huts with running water via nearby standpipes, a toilet block and cookhouse. No furniture was provided, and beds were usually a bag of hay or horsehair laid upon straw. The evenings saw singsongs around the campfires, often accompanied by much drinking of the local cider.

Although Londoners' labour was welcomed, they themselves were often not, sometimes being made to drink from jam jars in pubs in case they stole the tankards, and the younger family members banned from entering shops or playing with local children in case they were carrying fleas or disease.

The Salvation Army, Red Cross and visiting doctors offered vitamins, nit-combs and worming tablets in an attempt to improve the health of the East End children.

When the Second World War began, many families chose to stay in Kent rather than return to London and the threat of air-raids. The women joined the Land Army and helped with air-raid precaution work. With the evacuation from Dunkirk in May 1940 they handed out tea and sandwiches at railway stations to exhausted returning soldiers.

After the war, everything changed. British brewers began to buy American hops, Kentish hops were hit by disease, and agriculture began to be mechanised. By the 1960s, the annual hop from London to Kent had all but come to an end.

Today the seasonal hopping is done by workers from Eastern Europe who come to pick soft fruit in the summer and stay on to harvest hops in the autumn, though even now a handful of East Londoners still make the trip to Kent, remembering their time spent working in the Garden of England.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sade Etti.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

THIS week's recipe is from the Shoreditch Trust's Food Programme, which works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge.

It's an easy to prepare one-pot Moroccan show stopper that really packs a punch. A tagine is a Moroccan dish, which is named after the pot it's cooked in. Traditionally it is a slow cooked stew that includes meats such as lamb or chicken. Loaded with fragrant spices and fresh herbs, it is high in flavour and naturally low in salt. Mix up the flavours by adding dried fruits like apricots and raisins for a sweet and sour finish, or protein-packed pulses like chickpeas for a vegetarian option.

Moroccan chicken, olive and lemon tagine

Serves 4-6

Ingredients

- 6 chicken thighs
- 3 tbsp pitted olives
- 3 tbsp olive oil
- 3 garlic cloves, crushed
- 2 red onions, thinly sliced lengthways
- 2 tbsp chopped parsley
- 2 tsp ground ginger
- 1 tsp cinnamon
- 1 tsp ground pepper
- 1 tsp turmeric
- Juice of ½ lemon
- Small bunch of fresh coriander
- 2 small preserved lemons (optional).

Preparation time
20 mins

Cooking time
1 hour

- Heat a tagine or heavy-bottomed, shallow-lidded pan on a low heat and add the oil, followed by a layer of onion. Crush the garlic and add to the pan. Cook until golden brown
- Sprinkle over the ginger, pepper, turmeric and cinnamon, followed by the lemon juice, and coarsely chopped pulp of one preserved lemon and the rind of both, cut into slivers. Just add lemon slices if you are not using preserved lemon. Add the parsley and 2 tbsp of chopped coriander and mix well
- Arrange the chicken on top and scatter over the olives. Pour 175ml water into the pan, cover tightly and simmer very gently for about 45 minutes until the chicken is cooked through
- Season to taste and top with the remaining coriander. Best enjoyed with couscous or brown rice.

Results from the survey of private renters and landlords

INDEPENDENT consultancy, the Housing Quality Network (HQN), was commissioned by the Council to undertake an engagement exercise focusing on the future of the borough's private rented sector.

The survey last October built on a review by the Living in Hackney Scrutiny Commission, conducted in 2013/14, which looked at the potential for licensing private rented accommodation throughout the borough. Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "I'm grateful to HQN and everyone who took part in this report, which supports the view set out in the Council's '10 Steps' campaign, that in order to help us achieve a better private rented sector the Government needs to cut red tape around licensing schemes.

"The Council will consider its findings while reviewing its services for private renters and developing new ways to proactively target badly-maintained property, which could involve additional forms of licensing."
